DOES SCOUTING WORK?

We all know Scouting's goal is to prepare young people for life, but does it work? Scouting was put to the test over the course of three years, when a research team from Tufts University worked with the Boy Scouts of America's Cradle of Liberty Council to measure the character attributes of both Scouts and non-Scouts — all with a goal of better understanding the character development of youth as it was happening. The project, which was funded by the John Templeton Foundation and led by Dr. Richard M. Lerner, surveyed nearly 1,800 Cub Scouts and nearly 400 non-Scouts under age 12 using both interviews and survey data. In the beginning, there were no significant differences in character attributes between the two groups. By the end, however, the differences were striking in several areas:

- Cheerfulness
- Helpfulness
- Obedience
- Kindness
- Hopefulness
- Trustworthiness

KEY FINDINGS:

- The more time kids spend in Scouting, the better the outcomes in character development.
- Those who attend meetings regularly report higher outcomes virtually across the board when compared to Scouts with lower attendance.
- Scouts are more likely to embrace positive social values than non-Scouts.
- Scouts who are more engaged in the program report higher outcomes in nearly every category.

With fun and discovery at every turn, Scouting makes the most of right now. But what's more, it builds positive character and provides young people a foundation they can stand on to embrace opportunity, overcome obstacles, and make new discoveries.
